

MARTYR JULIAN OF TARSUS, IN CILICIA

The Holy Martyr Julian was born in the Asia Minor province of Cilicia. He was the son of a pagan senator, but his mother was a Christian. After the death of her husband, the mother of St. Julian moved to Tarsus, where her son was baptized and raised in Christian piety.

When Julian reached age 18, a persecution against Christians began under the emperor Diocletian (284-305); Julian was among those arrested. They brought him before the governor Marcian for trial, and for a long time they urged him to renounce Christ. Neither tortures nor threats, nor promises of gifts and honors could convince the pious youth to offer pagan sacrifice and deny Christ; he remained steadfast in his firm faith.

For a year they led the martyr through the cities of Cilicia, everywhere subjecting him to interrogation and tortures, after which they threw him in prison. His mother followed after him and prayed that the Lord would strengthen him. In Aegea, she besought the governor to permit her to visit him in prison, ostensibly to persuade her son to offer sacrifice to idols. Instead, she spent three days with St. Julian, exhorting him to be strong until the end.

St. Julian was again brought before the governor. Thinking that his mother had persuaded Julian to submit to the imperial decree, the governor began to praise her prudence. But she boldly confessed Jesus Christ, and fearlessly denounced polytheism. The governor ordered her feet cut off. Then Julian was tied into a sack filled with sand and poisonous snakes and thrown into the sea. His body was carried by waves to Alexandria, and with reverence was buried by a Christian in about the year 305. Afterwards, his relics were transferred to Antioch.

REMEMBRANCE OF HIS FATHER

St. Gregory the Theologian's father was also Gregory and a bishop. St. Gregory wrote a loving remembrance about his father after he died. They lived at a time when Christians were regularly baptized as adults. Here St. Gregory describes his father's character before and after baptism.

Even before he was baptized, his character made him a Christian. For, as many of our own who are with us, whose character anticipates their faith, and need only the name of that which indeed they possess. My father was one of these, inclined by his life towards us. He was so far advanced in self control, that he became at once most beloved and most modest, two qualities difficult to combine. What greater and more splendid testimony can there be to his justice than his exercise of a position second to none in the state, without enriching himself by a single farthing. Of his prudence this also is no slight proof. It was as a reward for such conduct, I think, that he attained to the faith. How this came about, a matter too important to be passed over, was in large measure due to the beneficent influence of his wife, my mother, Nonna.

He was approaching that regeneration by water and the Spirit, by which we confess to God the formation and completion of the Christlike man, and the transformation and reformation from the earthly to the Spirit. He approached the laver with warm desire and bright hope, after all the purgation possible, and a far greater purification of soul and body than that of the men who were to receive the tables from Moses. Their purification extended only to their dress, and a slight restriction of the belly, and a temporary continence. The whole of my father's past life had been a preparation for enlightenment, and a preliminary purification making sure the gift, in order that perfection might be entrusted to purity, and that the blessing might incur no risk in a soul which was confident in its possession of the grace. And as he was ascending out of the water, there flashed around him a light and a glory worthy of the disposition with which he approached the gift of faith; this was manifest even to some others, who for the time concealed the wonder, but shortly afterwards communicated it to one another. To the baptizing priest it was so clear and visible, that he could not even hold back the mystery, but publicly cried out that he was anointing with the Spirit his own successor.

He was most consistent with himself during the early days, and kept in harmony his life before the priesthood with its excellence, and his life after it with what had gone before, since it would have been unbecoming to begin in one way and end in another, or to advance to a different end from that which he had in view at first. For this is the law of spiritual sequence. And when he had been entrusted with it, the grace was the more glorified, being really the grace of God, and not of men.
